

ABSTRACT

A polygon mirror is formed from a sintered body, wherein the sintered body is formed by firing a mixed powder containing copper powder as a primary component, and having a weight density of about 75% or more in ratio to pure copper.